

... experimental voyage in search of a Utopia of painless existence.

To consider the problems before us we must divide our epoch into three periods; that of war, that of transition, that of the new normal, which undoubtedly will supercede the old. The question before us, therefore are, broadly, two: How shall we pass from war to the new normal with the least jar, in the shortest time? In what respect should the new normal be shaped to differ from the old?

Some contend that we should first envisage the new normal, and carve the measures of transition to suit its requirements. Others believe that we should cautiously feel our way through the period of transition, and arrive at what the new normal shall be, by the road of experience. The first would attempt reconstruction by synthetic process; the second would achieve it by natural growth. Who shall say that a new normal, artificially compounded at this distance from the future, will work? Who shall say that a new normal, patiently sought through trial and error, will not work?

So much for the opposing schools of thought which are intent upon sell, f

him h
I sa
having econoi
the o Beacu
of se
lor w
round
more
goods
railwa
him i
Bu
the o
loses
of so
other
porta
of ru
he e
enorm
of th
wher
force
erme
main
head
Coul
meal
now
bure

From the speech given by Henry A. Wise Wood, to the Nat'l Civic Association, 1918 (carried in many newspapers)

Clipped By:

kory_stamper
Thu, Aug 2, 2018